NEW: Updated impact evaluation book

The second edition of the "Impact Evaluation in Practice" handbook for students and policymakers has been released and is available for download.

The updated version includes new material on research ethics and partnerships, case studies illustrating different applications of impact evaluations, and a link to complementary web-based instructional material.

Evidence has an impact
When people know about it

Journalists are important voices in their communities. SIEF is working with international NGOs and journalist training programs to improve reporting around key issues for human development, and to encourage use of data that shows what works. We recently worked with journalists in Tanzania and also sponsored a panel for researchers and journalists there to understand how to successfully communicate with each other. To expand our reach, and use of evidence, we are producing webinars with the International Center for Journalists on impact evaluation and better health, education, water and sanitation and early childhood programs.

Watch our newest webinar on the early years and how to promote healthy child development.
Featured Evaluation | Making a Difference in Haiti

SIEF researchers, together with the Government of Haiti, carried out classroom observations to better understand why so many children leave the school system without having mastered even basic language and math skills. They discovered that while teachers show up, their teaching methods are ineffective, leaving many students unengaged and not reaching their potential. Read the blog here.
