Enhancing Teacher Education Program for Results
The Vietnam example

Why a PforR

• Avoid the project working in silos and thus with insufficient coordination and synergy with other teacher education actors

• Focus on specific results that are catalytic and can leverage an entire reform process, rather than inputs

• With increased ability of education sector authorities to deliver large programs, the overlay of additional controls to the existing country systems has become less necessary. Less energy, resources and time need to be mobilized to ensure proper due diligence

• Bolster the client capacity to implement and manage the entire education reform through its own systems and procedures

Lessons Learnt

1. Do not underestimate how difficult it is to explain this approach to counterparts

   In Vietnam: the three following group had very different ways of seeing a “P4R
   • Ministry Of Finance: Fast Disbursing Loans (wanted only to use country systems)
   • Ministry Of Planning and Investment: Consolidate Into Fewest Number Of Operations
   • Ministry Of Education and Training: Easily Accessible Funds To Purchase Inputs (most difficult to convince)
Lessons Learnt

2. Technical assistance is necessary - how to ensure TA is provided of the quality satisfactory to the Bank and as and when is needed:

- IPF components are hard to design and hard to implement, but are usually unavoidable.
- The best is trust funds (Bank-executed) but not always available.
Lessons Learnt

3. Preparation could likely take longer due to
   • Lack of a government reform program;
   • Prolonged assessment of country system and institutional capacity;

Technical and operation support is necessary even during the preparation and start up phase
Lessons Learnt

4. Meeting Bank assessment criteria can be very difficult and time consuming: plan accordingly!
   • Temptation to “Gerrymandering” to meet Bank assessment criteria
   • Explaining to counterparts that although country systems are used, the Bank will impose certain diligence requirements regardless
