INTERNATIONAL BANK FOR RECONSTRUCTION AND DEVELOPMENT
Washington, D.C. 20433

52-IM-6 In 1952 the WORLD BANK made a $12.5 million loan to Brasil to assist in the improvement of the suburban service of the Central do Brasil Railroad in Rio de Janeiro.

The photo shows a Bank-financed coach on one of the commuter trains getting ready to leave the station in Rio de Janeiro.

Photo: World Bank Staff April 1957
In 1953 the World Bank made a $12.5 million loan to Brazil to assist the improvement of the suburban service of the Central do Brasil Railroad in Rio de Janeiro.

The photo shows a Bank-financed coach and locomotive of a commuter train getting ready to leave the station in Rio de Janeiro.
INTERNATIONAL BANK FOR RECONSTRUCTION AND DEVELOPMENT
Washington, D.C. 20433

92-ER-11  In 1953 the WORLD BANK made a $12.5 million loan to Brazil to assist the improvement of the suburban service of the Central do Brasil Railroad in Rio de Janeiro.

The photo shows some Bank-financed coaches in the station yard at Rio de Janeiro. These are used on the commuter service which operates out of Rio de Janeiro.

Photo: World Bank Staff  April 1957
In 1952 the WORLD BANK made a $12.5 million loan to Brazil to assist the improvement of the suburban service of the Central do Brasil Railroad in Rio de Janeiro. Most of the funds was used to import new passenger train units. The photo shows the roof of one of the new rail coaches being assembled in England.

Photo: Metropolitan-Vickers 1955
90-BK-2 In 1953 the WORLD BANK made a $12.5 million loan to Brazil to assist the improvement of the suburban service of the Central de Brasil Railroad in Rio de Janeiro. Most of the funds was used to import new passenger train units. The photo shows one of the new units in the course of construction in England.

Photo: Metropolitan-Vickers 1955
92-BR-3 In 1953 the WORLD BANK made a $12.5 million loan to Brazil to assist the improvement of the suburban service of the Central de Brasil Railroad in Rio de Janeiro. Most of the funds was used to import new passenger train units, one of which is shown here being assembled in England.

Photor Metropolitan-Vickers 1955
In 1953 the World Bank made a $12.5 million loan to Brazil to assist the improvement of the suburban service of the Central de Brasil Railroad in Rio de Janeiro. Most of the funds was used to import new passenger train units, one of which is seen here being loaded onto a cargo ship in Manchester Docks in England.

Photo: Metropolitan-Vickers 1955
INTERNATIONAL BANK FOR RECONSTRUCTION AND DEVELOPMENT
Washington, D.C. 20433

92-E8-5 In 1953 the WORLD BANK made a $12.5 million loan to Brazil to assist the improvement of the suburban service of the Central de Brazil Railroad in Rio de Janeiro. Most of the funds was used to import new passenger train units, one of which is seen here being loaded on a cargo ship at the Manchester Docks in England.

Photo: Metropolitan-Vickers 1955
92-BB-7 In 1953 the WORLD BANK made a $12.5 million loan to Brazil to assist the improvement of the suburban service of the Central do Brasil Railroad in Rio de Janeiro.

The photo shows a train going along a suburban railway line near Rio de Janeiro.

Photo: C. Perry Weimer