Mr. Black and the World Bank UVA VVA

Eugene R. Black's re-election as president of the World Bank—formally known as the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development—represents a fitting reward for the good work he has already done in that position. In effect, the reward adds up to a resounding vote of confidence in him not only by the 55 member nations but also by the Eisenhower administration, without whose indorsement he could not have been named to his second five-year term, which will begin next July 1.

This expression of confidence certainly has been well-earned. For the bank, under Mr. Black's direction, has matured into one of the most effective of the world's co-operative institutions. Although only seven years old, and despite being the first enterprise of its kind in history, it has long since won strong backing in both private and public financial circles here in the United States and abroad. The secret of its success in that sense rests primarily in the fact that it has adhered to strict banking standards. Indeed, according to critics who want it to become more venturesome, it has been conservative to a fault.

However, along with most members of the governing board, Mr. Black has found prudence essential, and he has left no room for doubt that it will continue to govern the institution's operations. Thus, in addition to charging interest rates and requiring principal repayments within fixed periods of time, the bank makes no loan without first sending out special field missions to determine the economic justification and technical feasibility of the project involved. Further, after it grants a loan, it follows a close supervisory procedure to insure that the money is properly and efficiently spent. This may not please some people, but it has the virtue of preventing foolish or fly-by-night ventures that would be harmful alike to the bank and the borrowing countries.

In keeping with these and similar standards, the bank—whose governors are now meeting here with the governors of the International Monetary Fund—has advanced, since 1946, a total of a bit more than $1.5 billion in loans. These loans, as set forth in the eighth annual report which Mr. Black has just submitted, have gone out to 29 different countries—$734 million to Europe, $357 million to the Western Hemisphere, $187 million to Asia and the Middle East, $150 million to Australasia and $132 million to Africa. Most of the funds have been in the form of gold or American dollar credits, but Swiss francs, pounds sterling and other foreign currencies have been advanced in increasing measure within recent years. The chief purpose of the lending has been to build up electric power, transportation, communications, agriculture, industry, etc., in order to promote economic progress in underdeveloped areas and to bring about a general betterment of living standards.

~~Of course, measured in relation to past emergency undertakings like the Marshall Plan, the World Bank's operations have been and still are small. Nevertheless, running its own kind of Point-Four Program, the bank undoubtedly has done much to stimulate economic gains in many regions of the globe.~~

True enough, without freer international trade of the sort called for by Mr. Black in his address Wednesday, the best efforts of the World Bank or any comparable agency will be woefully inadequate. However, assuming that international tariffs will be decreased rather than great deal more—from year to year and decade to decade—as a permanent enterprise designed to improve the lot of mankind by encouraging industrial and agricultural development wherever such development is possible and needed.

Black's Second Term

The reappointment of Eugene R. Black for a second five-year term as president of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development assures continuity of operation that is important to the success of the Bank. Mr. Black has the confidence of his staff, of the member countries and of the financial community. He has built a staff that understands the problems of providing sound capital loans for underdeveloped countries. In his many trips abroad he has acquired a deep understanding both of the needs of the countries and of their capacity to undertake major development projects. The two have to be kept in balance in the interest of the borrowing country and the Bank and in order to have financial support when the Bank seeks to sell its bonds.

It is no criticism of Mr. Black to say that the World Bank has not been able to fill as large a part of the world's need for capital as might be desirable. Indeed, it would have been unwise for the new institution to have embarked upon an easy loan policy that might have satisfied its critics if not its supporters. In the last fiscal year, the Bank made only 10 loans totaling 178 million dollars. This was the low point for recent years and the record was a disappointment to Mr. Black and the Bank. In fiscal 1951 it made 21 loans totaling 297 million dollars. What these figures mean is that the World Bank cannot be the only institution in this field; but the role it does play is an essential one. While he is a cautious lender, Mr. Black recognizes that the Bank must be aggressive in seeking projects to support and must encourage developments of a sound nature.

The Bank's most important work may be in the years ahead. If general peace is restored there should be greater opportunities to underwrite necessary development projects. Contrary to the aims of its founders, the Bank could not step in immediately after the war and make huge reconstruction or development loans. It is not an emergency institution, but one that can best operate under conditions of stability and peace. Perhaps with greater success of the American Point IV program of technical assistance in underdeveloped countries, the World Bank will have greater opportunity to aid in capital projects.

Black Appointed To New Bank Term

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7.—Eugene R. Black, president of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, has been appointed to a new five-year term that runs to July 1, 1959, it was announced today.

Mr. Black resigned as senior vice president of the Chase National Bank, to accept the presidency of the International Bank on July 1, 1949. His new appointment is for a second successive five-year term.

No announcement was made of Mr. Black's salary but it is understood that it has not been changed. His present contract calls for $30,000 a year, net of taxes.

Mr. Black as president is chief of the Bank's operating staff and chairman ex officio of the Executive Directors—the representatives of the Bank's member countries. He served as U. S. Executive Director on the Bank's board for more than two years before he resigned from Chase to accept the presidency.

The Bank was in its third year of operations when Mr. Black became president. It has grown rapidly under his direction.

Black Renamed World Bank Head

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7 (AP).—Eugene R. Black was named today as president of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development—"the world bank"—for a second five-year term.

Mr. Black's second term will run through July 1, 1959. His present term will not expire until July 1, 1954.

The announcement of his selection came on the eve of the bank's eighth annual meeting, to be held here this week jointly with the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund—the bank's sister organization in the business of improving trade and prosperity among the nations of the world.

The four-day joint meeting starts Wednesday. Attending will be 250 finance ministers and other delegates from the fifty-four nations which make up both organizations, plus 400-odd private financiers invited as guests.

Eugene Black Re-Elected President of World Bank

Eugene R. Black has been elected to his second five-year term as president of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, according to an announcement by the secretary of the bank after a meeting of the executive directors. Mr. Black's new term will run to July 1, 1959.

Mr. Black, formerly senior vice-president of the Chase National Bank, New York, is a native Georgian. Son of the late Eugene R. Black, first governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta, he is the grandson of the late Henry W. Grady, noted Southern editor.

As president, Mr. Black heads the bank's operating staff and is chairman ex-officio of the executive directors. His first five-year term commenced July 1, 1949, and prior to then he was for more than two years executive director for the United States. His re-election was hailed in the nation's press as a reassurance that the same sound policies that have been evident in bank operations will be continued.

The period of his presidency has been one of great growth for the bank, which was in its third year at the time of his initial election. Seven countries have joined, increasing membership to 54. Funds available for lending have risen by $120 million, while loans have increased from $650 million to more than $1.6 billion. Accumulated net earnings and reserves have increased from $22 million to $114 million.

BLACK REELECTED WORLD BANK HEAD

Renaming for His Second Term Held Approval of Policies
by Members, U. S. Regime

The International Bank for Reconstruction and Development, which is holding its eighth annual meeting in Washington, D. C., this week, has re-elected Eugene R. Black to serve his second term as president. The United States holds about one-third of the voting power of the bank's board of directors, and the election, therefore, is interpreted by observers not only as an endorsement of Mr. Black's policies by the bank's fifty-four-member nations but also by the new Republican Administration.

As president, Mr. Black is chief of the bank's operating staff and chairman ex-officio of the executive directors who represent the member countries. Before starting his presidency on July 1, 1949, Mr. Black had served more than two years as United States Executive Director.

The period of his presidency has been one of growth for the bank, which was in its third year of operations at the time of his original appointment. Seven countries have since joined the bank, raising its membership to fifty-four. Funds available for lending from capital subscriptions have increased by $120,000,000, and loans have risen from $650,000,000 to more than $1,600,000,000. Accumulated net earnings and reserves were raised from $22,000,000 to $114,000,000.

Mr. Black came to the bank after more than a quarter-century spent in private investment banking, including fifteen years as an officer of the Chase National Bank, New York. After the first World War he started work in the Atlanta office of the Chase-Harris, Forbes Corporation and became assistant vice president in 1933. After the corporation was dissolved in that year, he was named a second vice president of the Chase National Bank, becoming a vice president in charge of the bond department in 1937.

He was appointed a senior vice president of Chase in 1949, and at the request of the United States Treasury continued temporarily to serve as United States Executive Director of the International Bank. In the same year he was appointed to the presidency of the International Bank, succeeding John J. McCloy, who later became United States High Commissioner to Germany and is now chairman of the Chase Bank.

Black Named World Bank's Head Again

Eugene R. Black has been named to head the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development for another five-year term, it was announced by the directors yesterday.

Black's selection is viewed as an expression of confidence by the Eisenhower Administration in his administration of the World Bank since his re-election would not have been possible without the approval of Treasury Secretary George M. Humphrey.

A long-time banker, Black first came to the World Bank in 1947 as the United States executive director. In 1949 he became the Bank's head, succeeding John J. McCloy. Black's appointment had the approval of the Truman Administration.

During the years he has headed the Bank, Black has concentrated on establishing a banker-client relationship between the Bank and its 54 member nations. In addition, he was instrumental in preparing the money market for the Bank's initial 250-million-dollar bond issue in 1947 and in building private banking and investment confidence in the World Bank's securities.

The World Bank's board of governors is about to gather in Washington for the annual meeting along with directors of the International Monetary Fund. The sessions open on Wednesday and continue through Saturday.

Black Is Elected For Second Term as Head of World Bank

By the Associated Press

Eugene R. Black, a former official of the Chase National Bank in New York, has been re-elected president of the 54-nation World Bank. His second five-year term will start next July 1.

Mr. Black's re-election, announced last night implied an indorsement of him by the Eisenhower administration. The bank conducts extensive fund raising operations in this country, and its president almost necessarily must be an American acceptable to the administration.

Mr. Black.

The Boards of Governors of the bank and the International Monetary Fund will open their annual meetings here tomorrow.

Established in 1946.

Since Mr. Black became president, the bank, established in 1946, has added seven new countries to its membership and $120 million to its capital subscriptions.

Its loans for the reconstruction of war-damaged economies and improvement of underdeveloped areas have risen from $650 million to more than $1.6 billion. Net earnings and reserves increased from $22 million to $114 million.

Prepared Bond Market.

Mr. Black is credited with preparing the financial market for the first issue of world bank bonds in 1947, a $250 million flotation of a wholly new type of security. He also was a leader in the effort to make the bonds eligible for purchase by American banks and insurance companies. This required the revision of laws regulating investment in many States.

Since then further issues have been floated in this country, Britain, Switzerland and Canada. The equivalent of $56 million in bonds now is outstanding in currencies other than United States dollars.

WORLD BANK KEEPS BLACK

Re-Election Implies Indorsement By Washington

Washington, Sept. 7 (AP)—The World Bank announced today the re-election of Eugene R. Black as its president for a second five year term starting next July 1.

The selection implies an indorsement by President Eisenhower of the policies pursued by Black since he was named United States executive director of the bank by former President Truman in 1947. Black became president in 1949.

Though elected by directors representing 54 countries, the bank president almost necessarily must be an American, and acceptable to the Administration, because of the bank's extensive fund-raising operations in this country.

From Chase National Bank

Black was a senior vice president of the Chase National Bank in New York when he was named to the presidency of the global lending institution, the full name of which is the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

The boards of governors of the bank and the International Monetary Fund will hold their eighth annual meeting Wednesday through Saturday here.

Since Black became president, the bank, established in 1946, has added seven new countries to its membership and $120,000,000 to its capital subscriptions.

Its loans for the reconstruction of war-damaged economies and improvement of underdeveloped areas have risen from $650,000,000 to more than $1,600,000,000.

Black Gets 2d Term As World Bank Head

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7 (UP).—Eugene R. Black was named today as president of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development—"the World Bank"—for a second five-year term.

Black's second term will run through July 1, 1959. His present term will not expire until next July 1.

8TH ANNUAL MEETING

The announcement of his selection came on the eve of the bank's eighth annual meeting, to be held here this week jointly with the annual meeting of the International Monetary Fund—the bank's sister organization in the business of improving trade and prosperity among the nations of the world.

The four-day joint meeting starts Wednesday. Attending will be some 250 finance ministers and other delegates from the 54 nations which make up both organizations, plus 400-odd private financiers invited as guests.

JOINED BANK IN 1947

Black joined the bank as the United States full-time representative in 1947 after 25 years in private investment banking, including 15 years as an officer of the Chase National Bank, in New York City.

As president of the World Bank, Black succeeded John J. McCloy, more recently U. S. High Commissioner for Western Germany.

The bank's membership has risen to 54 from 47 during Black's presidency. Its funds available for lending from member countries' subscriptions have risen by $120,000,000. Loans now total more than $1,600,000,000, compared to $650,000,000 when Black took over and the bank has added $92,000,000 to the $22,000,000 of earnings it had accumulated up to that time.

World Bank Directors Rename Black President for Second Term

American Banker Bureau

WASHINGTON, D. C. — The secretary of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development announces that the executive directors have selected Eugene R. Black as president of the Bank for his second five-year term to July 1, 1959.

Mr. Black, formerly senior vice-president of Chase National Bank, and son of a famous Atlanta banker of a generation ago, was elected by unanimous vote of the World Bank's directors, the secretary, Morton M. Mendel, stated.

Announcement of Mr. Black's re-election for the World Bank presidency was received as an assurance for the foreseeable future of continuation of the policies of sound finance in the loaning and operating program of the Bank, which have been instituted under his management.

As president, Mr. Black is chief of the Bank's operating staff and chairman ex officio of the executive directors, who represent the Bank's member countries. His first five-year term began on July 1, 1949. Before that he had served for more than two years as United States executive director.

Throughout his association with the Bank, Mr. Black has taken a close interest in the marketing of the Bank's securities, both in the United States and elsewhere, and in establishing a banker-client relationship of full confidence between the Bank and its member countries. He has traveled widely on Bank business; he is a frequent visitor to the financial centers of Europe, and in successive years since assuming the presidency has traveled in the Bank's member nations in the Western Hemisphere, the Middle East, Asia and Australasia.

The period of Mr. Black's presidency has been one of growth for the International Bank, which was in its third year of operations at the time of his appointment. Seven countries joined the Bank, increasing membership to 54. Funds available for lending from capital subscriptions rose by $120 million. Loans grew from $650 million to more than $1.6 billion. Accumulated net earnings and reserves increased from $22 million to $114 million.

As United States executive director, Mr. Black took a leading role during 1947 and 1948 in obtaining State legislation to make the Bank's bonds eligible for purchase by U. S. banks, insurance companies and other institutions, and he was instrumental in preparing the market for the Bank's first bond issue, amounting to $250 million, in 1947. Since that time, the Bank's outstanding issues of bonds have risen to the equivalent of $556 million, consisting of subsequent issues in the United States and in the United Kingdom, Switzerland and Canada. The equivalent of $56 million of Bank bonds is now outstanding in currencies in other than U. S. dollars, and it is estimated that purchasers abroad also hold $110 million worth of the Bank's dollar bonds. An international market has also been created for securities from the Bank's loan portfolio.

Mr. Black comes to the International Bank from more than 25 years spent in private investment banking, including 15 years as an officer of the Chase National Bank of New York.

World Banker Claims Tariffs Make All Poor

Washington, D. C., Sept. 9 (U.P).
—President Eugene R. Black of the World Bank sharply criticized this country's high tariffs today and asserted they would "make the world, including the United States, poorer."

Opening the eighth annual meeting of the bank and the International Monetary Fund, he said the United States, by maintaining high trade barriers out of fear of competition, deprives foreign countries of dollars with which to buy American products. This cannot be justified, he said, because this nation is "the giant of world economy."

He warned that the world trade balance is precarious and called on the United States to make a "durable contribution" to world stability by lowering its import duties.

President Eisenhower sent the meeting a message pledging his full efforts to increase world trade. He won a one-year extension of the present Reciprocal Trade Act from Congress and has appointed a commission to study world trade problems before suggesting changes in the law.

The bank's executive board recommended that Communist Czechoslovakia, only Soviet-bloc member, be suspended from membership unless she pays $625,000 still owed on her original $125,000,000 subscription.

The move was considered by a 16-nation committee on finance and organization. It will be placed before the full 55-nation meeting Saturday, when approval is expected.

WORLD BANK REELECTS EUGENE BLACK AS HEAD

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—(AP) Eugene R. Black, a former official of the Chase National Bank in New York, has been reelected president of the 54-nation World Bank. His second five-year term will start next July 1.

Black's reelection, announced last night, implied an endorsement of him by the Eisenhower administration. The bank conducts extensive fund raising operations in this country, and its president almost necessarily must be an American acceptable to the administration.

The boards of governors of the bank and the International Monetary Fund will open their annual meetings here tomorrow.

The boards of governors of the bank and the International Monetary fund will open their annual meetings in Washington Wednesday.

Since Black became president of the bank, established in 1946, it has added seven new countries to its membership and 120 million dollars to its capital subscriptions. Its loans for the reconstruction of war damaged economies and improvement of underdeveloped areas have risen from 650 million dollars to more than $1,600,000,000. Net earnings and reserves increased from 22 million dollars to 114 millions.

WORLD BANK

WASHINGTON, Sept. 7 (AP)—
The World Bank announced today the re-election of Eugene
R. Black as its president for a second five-term starting next July 1.

The selection implies an endorsement by President Eisenhower of the policies pursued by Black since he was named United States executive director of the bank by former President Truman in 1947. Black became president in 1949.

Black was a senior vice president of the Chase National Bank in New York when he was named to the presidency of the global lending institution, the full name of which is the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

Black is credited with preparing the financial market for the first issue of World Bank bonds in 1947, a 250-million-dollar floatation of a wholly new type of security. He also was a leader in the effort to make the bonds eligible for purchase by American banks and insurance companies. This required the revision of laws regulating investment in many states.

That the directors of the World Bank (International Bank for Reconstruction and Development) should re-elect Eugene R. Black as president comes as no surprise to friends of the native Atlantan.

They had recognized the quiet, competent grandson of Henry Grady as an outstanding financier long before he was elected in 1947 as a director of the World Bank. His subsequent elevation to the presidency was only logical as is his retention in that post.

As head of the $10,000,000,000 international lending agency, he is making his contribution to the cause of peace by helping to make life more worth living around the globe.

Black Re-Elected World Bank Head

WASHINGTON (AP).—Eugene R. Black, a former official of the Chase National Bank in New York, has been re-elected president of the 54-nation world bank. His second five-year term will start next July 1.

Black's re-election implied an endorsement of him by the Eisenhower administration. The bank conducts extensive fund-raising operations in this country, and its president almost necessarily must be an American acceptable to the administration.

The boards of governors of the bank and the international monetary fund will open their annual meetings here Wednesday.

Black's Second Term

The reappointment of Eugene R. Black for a second five-year term as president of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development assures continuity of operation that is important to the success of the bank. Mr. Black has the confidence of his staff, of the member countries and of the financial community. He has built a staff that understands the problems of providing sound capital loans for under-developed countries. In his many trips abroad he has acquired a deep understanding both of the needs of the countries and of their capacity to undertake major development projects. The two have to be kept in balance in the interest of the borrowing country and the bank and in order to have financial support when the bank seeks to sell its bonds.

It is no criticism of Mr. Black to say that the World Bank has not been able to fill as large a part of the world's need for capital as might be desirable. Indeed, it would have been unwise for the new institution to have embarked upon an easy loan policy that might have satisfied its critics if not its supporters. In the last fiscal year, the bank made only ten loans, totaling $178 million. This was the low point for recent years and the record was a disappointment to Mr. Black and the bank. In fiscal 1951 it made 21 loans, totaling $297 million. What these figures mean is that the World Bank cannot be the only institution in this field; but the role it does play is an essential one. While he is a cautious lender, Mr. Black recognizes that the bank must be aggressive in seeking projects to support and must encourage developments of a sound nature.

The bank's most important work may be in the years ahead. If general peace is restored there should be greater opportunities to underwrite necessary development projects. Contrary to the aims of its founders, the bank could not step in immediately after the war and make huge reconstruction or development loans. It is not an emergency institution, but one that can best operate under conditions of stability and peace. Perhaps with greater success of the American Point IV program of technical assistance in under-developed countries, the World Bank will have greater opportunity to aid in capital projects.

at first hand the impact of this tragedy on the Italian people."

"In the face of all this personal suffering and frustration, so much of which could have been alleviated, it is incomprehensible to the government and people of the United States that the Soviet Union could have treated this issue with such callousness and with such complete contempt for civilized international practice," he said.

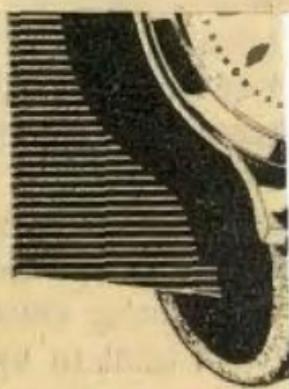

"In calling upon the Soviet Union to give to all the German, Japanese, Italian and other prisoners of war . . . an unrestricted opportunity of repatriation and fully to account for all such persons, the United Nations is not asking for the impossible. It is merely asking that the Soviet Union conform to an accepted principle of international law, as it has customarily been given effect by all civilized nations."

Dr. Heinz von Truetzschler, of the German Federal Republic's Ministry of Foreign Affairs, charged the Soviet Union with "evading the question" of 102,958 German prisoners of war known to be in Soviet territory between 1945 and 1953.

Addressing the closing meeting of the ad hoc commission on prisoners of war, he said it was necessary "to prove to the government of the Soviet Union that the common efforts will be continued until the Soviet government is ready to release all prisoners still detained and to give information on those prisoners who died in captivity."

The German delegation to the commission has submitted 19 volumes of statistics concerning missing prisoners and civilians to the commission. The commission's report will be forwarded to New York within the next few days, chairman J. G. Guerrero, of Salvador, said today. He said the commission "stands ready to continue in order to accomplish as far as possible the task that has been assigned to it."

A la conférence du Fonds Monétaire International qui s'ouvre demain 205 les grands 0 problèmes ne seraient pas traités

C'est demain à Washington que s'ouvre la huitième conférence annuelle du Fonds Monétaire International et de la Banque de la Reconstruction.

Les gouverneurs se réunissent dans un temps mort de la politique économique américaine : deux semaines après la publication du rapport Douglas, favorable à la convertibilité et à la libéralisation des échanges, dix jours avant la réunion de la Commission Randall, qui doit déposer le 6 mars ses conclusions sur la politique financière et monétaire des Etats-Unis vis-à-vis des pays étrangers.

Pour les gouverneurs étrangers, la réunion ne peut être qu'une occasion de contacts officiels et officieux : M. Hum-

M. Baumgartner à Washington

Le gouverneur de la Banque de France, M. Wilfrid Baumgartner, est arrivé à New-York, en route pour Washington, où il doit assister aux réunions du Fonds Monétaire International et de la Banque Internationale.

Il a indiqué, dans une brève déclaration, que la situation financière de la France s'était « un peu améliorée tant du point de vue extérieur qu'intérieur, mais nous avons encore beaucoup à faire ».

phrey, secrétaire d'Etat au Trésor, préside la délégation américaine.

Mais on ne prévoit certes pas une discussion approfondie.

Si la question de l'or est soulevée, elle ne sera soulevée que pour la forme après une demande de relèvement du prix de l'or, faite comme chaque année par le représentant de l'Afrique du Sud.

Etant donné son absence totale de chance de succès, le ministre des Finances sud-africain, M. Madenga, n'est d'ailleurs pas venu à la conférence.

Par contre, le Fonds Monétaire a prévu pour la session des gouverneurs de vendredi après-midi une discussion sur le thème sur « le renouvellement des politiques monétaires », ce qui prouve que cet organisme est également désireux de souligner le besoin accru d'appliquer dans les pays membres une politique financière intérieure saine.

M. Black est réélu président de la B.I.R.D.

WASHINGTON, 8 septembre. — La Banque Internationale pour la Reconstruction et le Développement (B.I.R.D.) a annoncé hier soir la réélection de M. Eugen Black au poste de président pour un nouveau mandat de cinq ans commençant le 1er juillet 1954.

Cette nomination montre que le Président Eisenhower approuve la politique suivie par M. Black depuis qu'il a été nommé directeur de la Banque par l'ancien Président Truman, en 1947. M. Black a été nommé président en 1949. Bien qu'élu par les administrateurs représentant 54 pays, le président de la B.I.R.D. doit presque nécessairement être Américain et avoir l'approbation du gouvernement en raison des opérations de grande envergure de la Banque concernant des levées de fonds aux Etats-Unis.

M. Black est un ancien vice-président de la Chase National Bank. Depuis qu'il est devenu président de la B.I.R.D., cette institution a accru le nombre de ses pays membres et ajouté 120 millions de dollars à son capital souscrit. Ses prêts pour la reconstruction des économies endommagées par la guerre et pour l'amélioration des pays insuffisamment développés sont passés de 650 millions de dollars à plus de 1,6 milliard de dollars.

L'Egypte sollicite $ 172 millions de la B.I.R.D.

Le gouvernement égyptien a l'intention de solliciter un prêt à longue échéance de la B.I.R.D. pour l'aider à financer un projet de construction de barrage.

M. Eli Emary, ministre des Finances égyptien, qui assistera aux réunions du Fonds Monétaire et de la B.I.R.D., demanderait un prêt de $ 172.000.000 à la B.I.R.D. pour ce barrage dont le coût total est évalué à $ 516.000.000.

Wiederwahl Blacks zum Präsidenten der Weltbank. Washington, 8. Sept. -er. Die Direktoren der Internationalen Bank für Wiederaufbau und Wirtschaftsförderung (Weltbank) haben Eugen R. Black zum Präsidenten der Bank für die Dauer von weiteren fünf Jahren wiedergewählt. Seine neue Amtsdauer läuft bis zum 1. Juli 1959. Black, der früher Vizepräsident der Chase National Bank war, wirkte seit März 1947 als amerikanischer Executive Director der Weltbank, bis er im Mai 1949 als Nachfolger von John J. McCloy zum Präsidenten der Weltbank ernannt wurde.
